What a prototype skips before it can hold health data

SWIPE

The workflow was already right

A senior-care operator ran its concierge team on a low-code prototype. The screens matched how the team really worked.

But it had no users

The "submitted by" field was a dropdown of six hard-coded names. Now there are invite-only accounts with two-factor and passkeys.

Everyone could see everything

Each facility's records are now separated underneath every query. A facility user sees only their own facilities.

Nothing recorded who changed what

An append-only audit log now keeps a timeline on every record and for every user.

We audited it before launch

Two reviews against 33 facilities of test data found 48 issues. Eight were fixed the same night.
