Shopify, custom or headless?

SWIPE

Start with what loses sales

A slow product page, search that fails on a typo, a checkout that demands an account. Fix those first.

Shopify can do more than you think

Custom themes, Functions and checkout extensions cover most of what stores assume the platform can't do.

Most stores need fewer apps

A dozen apps, several doing the same job, all loading on every page. Cutting them makes the store faster.

Headless when the platform is the limit

The theme can't render the brand, or you run a separate store per market. Then it earns its complexity.

When we’d talk you out of it

A two-person team, a theme that is mostly fine, or a six-week deadline. A custom theme ships sooner.
